

LEARNING
EXPEDITION
CHICAGO, USA

October 17-19, 2019

As managers of the companies and authorities responsible for the development of global business districts, we know our territories drive the economic and financial productivity of cities around the world. They also constitute unique urban structures that bring to life an incredible amount of human talent and are breeding grounds of innovation.

Our role as global business district practitioners is to raise awareness of current issues, building capacities and promoting innovation to develop long-term solutions. By doing this, we not only create value to our own territories, but also inspire other cities worldwide.

To stay competitive in the face of a changing world, we need to learn. The most effective learning outcomes go beyond the purely cognitive, to the collaborative and experiential. That's why we have created our first Learning Expedition. Based on an integrated experimental format, this expedition will use an exchange-centered focus as the primary source of inspiration and innovation.

In the fall of 2019, leaders of global business districts, business districts managing companies, and urban planning authorities will gather in Chicago, USA, for a fast-paced trip focused on Place-making issues.

Three days of learning expedition will enable us to immerse in the latest urban trends, meet the key players of Downtown Chicago - from innovative startups to the local authorities - to learn from their practices, visit unique places of innovation, get in touch with the GBD Innovation Club network, and exchange and benefit from immersion in the ecosystem.

We look forward to welcoming you in Chicago, to exchanging the experience, and to finding together new innovative solutions.

WALKING TOUR OF THE CHICAGO LOOP

🗨️ Guides

Michael Edwards

President & CEO, Chicago Loop Alliance

Kalindi Parikh

Director of Planning, Chicago Loop Alliance

Over the past 200 years, the Loop has served as Chicago’s official downtown—the go-to spot in the city for business, shopping, and tourism. It is the second largest commercial business district in the U.S. after Midtown Manhattan in New York City, and it is home to about 30 percent of all private-sector jobs in Chicago (despite being only .7 percent of the city’s total land area). Why did this part of Chicago evolve into the global player it is today? The Loop’s access to transportation, its dense and walkable geography, and its setting on Grant Park and Lake Michigan continue to attract workers, shoppers, visitors, and investors from around the world. This one-hour walking tour will give attendees a behind-the-scenes look at how the Loop works (and doesn’t), as well as downtown management strategies along State Street that have proven effective.

THE ROLE OF ARTS & CULTURE IN A GLOBAL BUSINESS DISTRICT

The quality of the urban environment plays an increasingly important role in today's global business district. A rich collection of arts and cultural assets is now a necessity to attract and retain talent from around the world. The Chicago Loop has the most robust offering of arts and culture of any U.S. business district in terms of quality, quantity, and variety—including the Art Institute of Chicago, an acclaimed theater district, renowned public art, and more. According to Chicago Loop Alliance's Arts in the Loop Economic Impact Study, arts and culture in the Loop have an annual economic impact of $2.25 billion, affecting sectors like retail, hospitality, real estate, and more.

Learn how the arts drive the success of a business district through direct economic impact, community building, and more.

RESIDENTIAL LIVING IN A GLOBAL BUSINESS DISTRICT

Like many global business districts, the Chicago Loop is increasingly attracting the young and wealthy as preferences shift from the suburbs to the urban core. In the last eight years, the Loop has experienced rapid growth in the residential sector, adding some 4,500 housing units. This session will explore the current state of residential development in the Loop, tracking its momentum and offering ideas on how to maintain the forward trajectory.

Experts in residential real estate development will present information on the profile of the global business district resident, and developers will discuss the building trends necessary for a successful project.

INNOVATION: MAPILLARY

Mapillary is a street-level imagery platform that uses computer vision to fix the world's maps. Images from any device are combined into a visualization of the world that generates map data for improving maps, developing cities, and progressing the automotive industry. Mapillary's tools enable anyone to collect, share, and use street-level images.

Today, people and organizations all over the world have contributed more than 500 million images toward Mapillary's mission of helping people understand the world's places through images and making this data available, with clients and partners including the World Bank, HERE, and Toyota Research Institute. Mapillary has raised $24.5 million in venture capital from some of the world's most seasoned investors, including Sequoia Capital, Atomico, and BMWi Ventures.

THE INCREASING IMPORTANCE OF PUBLIC SPACE IN GLOBAL BUSINESS DISTRICTS

Significant demographic shifts including the rise of the millennial generation and the return of empty-nesters are resulting in new demands on downtowns. These demands require districts to provide a set of compelling and robust urban experiences in public places that influence personal decisions regarding where to live, whether to accept a job offer, or even where to locate a company. Studies demonstrate that vibrant public places can create measurable economic dividends for downtowns. The increased use of mobile technology and need for more personal collaboration require new places for people to work, including the public realm. Attractive places to meet and more opportunity for chance interactions and serendipity to occur (something cities have always been good at) make for more competitive districts.

The City of Chicago and Chicago Loop Alliance recognized it must activate underperforming public spaces in the Loop. Speakers will detail the history, impact, and meaning of Millennium Park, the Chicago Riverwalk, and the ACTIVATE initiative.

CHICAGO GLOBAL TOURISM STRATEGY

Since 2012, Choose Chicago and the City of Chicago have increased annual visitors from 49 million to 58 million—an 18 percent change over just six years. Chicago’s strategy has targeted vacationers, business travelers, and, increasingly, the international traveler. This increase in visitation has stimulated a boom in the construction of hotel rooms, the opening of food and beverage establishments, and competition for these travelers’ attention—and their wallets. As visitors become a bigger economic driver than ever, Chicago institutions have to respond. Navy Pier has undergone major renovations. The Art Institute of Chicago is considering how to appeal to visitors in its programming. And hotels in the Loop are opening, renovating, and finding their niche to stand out against some 500,000 Airbnb room nights. Learn what it takes to compete for international and national tourism.

INNOVATION: VAMONDE

Chicago spends millions on an aggressive national and international marketing strategy each year. While there are plenty of world-class events to experience Chicago, like all global business districts, connecting city events and experiences to people is more challenging than ever. Cities and their attractions recognize the need for robust digital and mobile solutions to meet the demands of today's travelers and residents. Yet, few have the resources to achieve their future ambitions.

Chicago-based VAMONDE is the Smart Tourism network for cities, empowering visitors and residents to learn, experience and navigate any city. VAMONDE is the future of city engagement and placemaking. VAMONDE combines placemaking, wayfinding, storytelling, and analytics to connect the city and all its experiences with digitally savvy visitors through immersive content.

VAMONDE provides the technology for hundreds of global organizations including Chicago's DMO (Choose Chicago), Chicago Loop Alliance, dozens of Chicago's attractions, museums, and hotels, and the GBD conference. Download the VAMONDE app for iOS or Android or go to www.VAMONDE.com so that you can experience Chicago and all its incredible stories and places.
